

February 24, 2020

James M. D'Angelo, MD
Bradenton, Florida

Dear Dr. D'Angelo:

SEARCH is pleased to support and work with you and your organization to conduct a detailed archaeological survey in the English Channel to locate the remains of the aircraft that was carrying Glenn Miller on his fatal flight to entertain troops in Europe in the last months of World War II.

As the largest private cultural resources firm in the United States, we have both expertise and capacity to assist in this important effort. SEARCH has an extensive history and large and diverse staff with a track record of multiple missions, both in the United States and internationally, to locate ships and submerged aircraft. This has included wrecks both submerged and at high altitude. SEARCH has also worked with and for the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency (DPAA) on these missions.

SEARCH stands ready to work with you to locate Glenn Miller's aircraft and conduct archaeological work to bring closure to the story of the heroic service and sacrifice of this brave American and those who perished with him.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "J. Delgado", written over a circular stamp or seal.

James P. Delgado, PhD
Senior Vice President